Fund for Inclusive Recovery

The COVID-19 Response Fund evolved into the Fund for Inclusive Recovery, a pooled fund investing in BIPOC leaders, organizations, and communities most impacted by the pandemic and systemic racism. Founded on the belief that we all do better when we all do better, these targeted resources will help our community emerge from this crisis as a stronger, more unified region. We are working with a Community Advisory Group of 22 local, mostly BIPOC leaders to identify investments that will build organizations' capacity. These investments will provide flexible, sustained funding for organizations, boost grassroots organizations and leaders, and offer working capital for chronically under-resourced organizations. Our goal is to raise $50 million for the Fund for Inclusive Recovery over the next five years. Phase 1 investments of $12.6 million supporting community power and base building approaches that create the necessary foundation for meaningful systems and policy change were approved in April 2022. We are working with the Community Advisory Group on the focus for Phase 2 investments.

Indigenous Framework

Seattle Foundation is launching an Indigenous Framework in 2022 that leverages funding and advocacy to amplify the work of Native-led nonprofits and community movements in King County. The Indigenous Framework will prioritize a general operating support approach that allows Native-led groups to self-determine where resources are most needed to drive future systems change. $400,000 will be awarded to support this effort.

REPAIR – Racially Equitable Philanthropy Aimed at Initiating Reparations

REPAIR is a framework aimed at advancing and supporting Black-led community leadership. Through REPAIR, Seattle Foundation is committing to a minimum investment of $25 million to Black-led organizations in the Seattle region over the next five years, beginning in 2021. REPAIR represents a comprehensive approach to a sustained shift in how we partner with and support the Black community across all organizational functions—engagement of donors and fund holders, grantmaking priorities, and development of internal accounting and operational practices.
